Steak house burns

By Patrick Foley
Staff writer

Ralph & Charlie's Steak House, 1431 Fourth St., Madison, was destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning.

And Madison firefighters were called out later in the day to Schermer's Super Market, 12th Street and Madison Avenue, to extinguish smoldering insulation on the roof of that business.

The fire department was called to the restaurant at 1:29 a.m. and found the building engulfed in flames.

A couple employees were cleaning the steak broiler and caught the ceiling on fire," said David Thebeau, owner of the restaurant and bar.

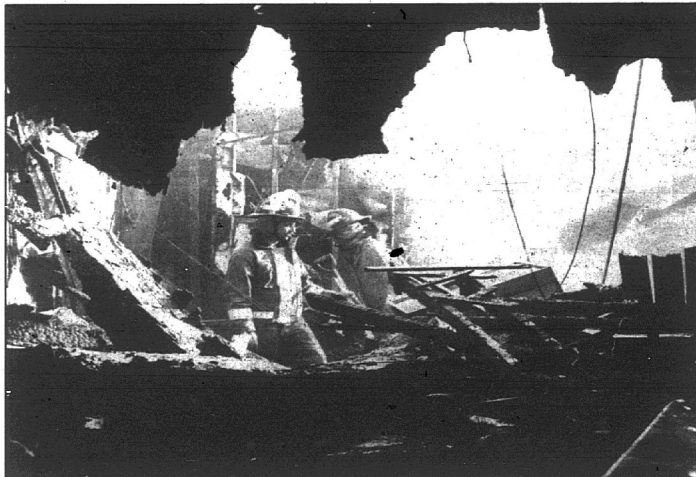

"I was awake in my apartment (over the business) and saw the light (of the flames) through a glass block window."

"I keep a sprinkler on the roof (to spray) on the air conditioner on really hot days and I used it to put out the flames on the roof. But it was too late, (the fire) was in the ceiling," he said.

Fire Chief Robbie Robbins said no injuries occurred at the scene, but another source told a reporter that one firefighter was believed to have stepped on a nail and required medical attention.

The establishment was open for business at the time the fire started, but all patrons and employees were able to get out.

Wolf committed to tax increase

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

SPRINGFIELD — No one will know the outcome of the proposed two-year surcharge on the Illinois income tax until the final days of the legislative session, according to Rep. Sam Wolf, its co-sponsor.

The surcharge is designed to provide funds for education and local municipalities.

"I expect it to go to a conference committee and after the conference committee report and the pros and cons are discussed, something will happen," he said. "But I think the squeeze is on — something must come out of this session providing funds for education."

The legislative session is supposed to end on June 30, but may carry over a few days for unfinished business. "Let's put it this way: The session hasn't ended on time in the last 20 years," Wolf said.

The house bill calls for a surcharge of 46 percent on personal income (currently taxed 2.5 percent) and 736 on corporate income (currently taxed 4 percent). The House of Representatives approved the measure May 17. A vote by the Senate had been expected, but has been postponed.

"All kinds of reasons have been given by Republicans finding fault with the bill," Wolf said. "But I think they are just chagrined at not having a concept that is equivalent to this one."

"(Complaints about) the two-year cap, I don't think that is a problem. I think that's a chip that can be used in negotiation."

"I could support taking the two-year cap off. It would be difficult to fund programs for two years and then take it all away. It places the school or municipality in a precarious position and doesn't enhance their planning."

"The argument about it not reducing property tax falls short. There is nothing in the bill that prohibits anyone from using the revenue to reduce property taxes."

Wolf said he is surrounded by a "general feeling that they would like to modify it," but he said he is committed to the bill as it is.

It provides funds for education that are undoubtedly needed and at the same time helps out local municipalities who have lost revenue since federal revenue sharing was discontinued," he said.

Two districts in Wolf's district, Madison and Edwardsville, are on the financial watch list and Wolf said there are

Tops from class of '89 prepare for college

QUAD CITY AREA — Maybe it's the rising computer age.

Or perhaps it's a simple pre-occupation with numbers.

But whatever it is, at least five students in this area are out to change the view of the United States as a country whose schools place little or no emphasis on mathematics and science programs.

Most of this year's valedictorians and salutatorians from the three public high schools have chosen to pursue a math or science-related program in college.

"Numbers caused a great deal of confusion in choosing this year's valedictorian at Granite City High School."

Barbara Porter was named valedictorian instead of the top honor going to Richard Harmon, salutatorian — a decision made by 0007 of a point.

Related photos, lists of graduates

Barbara, the daughter of William and Eleanor Porter, is considering becoming a high school math teacher.

"We're number people, I guess," she said of herself and Richard.

Math and Spanish were her favorite subjects in school and she would like to at least minor in Spanish at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, where she'll begin classes this fall.

"I think I could do a good job of it," Barbara said of teaching.

"I've seen so many teachers who have problems (teaching). I'd like to do a better job."

While at GCHS, Barbara was a member of the math team, the science club, the National Honor Society, Jets and the Young Authors' Club.

Numbers also appeal to Richard, who plans to major in math or math economics at Tulane University in New Orleans.

The son of Virgil and Betty Harmon, Richard would like to become an actuary for an insurance company, using the job as a step up the corporate ladder.

Actuaries gather data and figures and use the information to determine insurance rates.

"You learn a lot about the company because you have the numbers in front of you," he said.

At GCHS, Richard was treasurer of the science club this year and spent two years on the scholar quiz team.

He was a member of the math team, JETS, Mensa and several local computer clubs. Richard received a Senior Athletic Award for his four years on the tennis team. He was also named the team's most valuable player for this year.

Madison High School salutatorian Rachel Huey has chosen science — specifically veterinary medicine — for her course of study.

"It's something I've wanted to do since I was little," Rachel said.

The daughter of Merrill Ray and Jenny Huey, Rachel will be starting college this fall at the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana, where she has a scholarship. But Rachel isn't waiting for college to get hands-on experience as an animal doctor.

She has been working at the Creekwood Veterinary Clinic in Collinsville since January and plans to return there during summers to do clinical work.

"I really like it because there's always something different," Rachel said of the clinic, where patients have included ferrets and owls. "I learn something new every day."

While at MHS, Rachel was active on the student council and the yearbook staff; belonged to the drama club and the National Honor Society; and played on the volleyball and softball teams.

PIECE BY PIECE: Workers remove the first I-beam from the Venice viaduct Wednesday afternoon as a piece of machinery removes the pavement of the eastbound lanes in background. All steel supports will be removed and the structure will be rebuilt up from its concrete pillars. Two lanes will be done at a time to allow traffic to use the overpass during the construction scheduled to be completed in late 1990.

Venice's 'poor' label no surprise to its officials

By Mike Myers

VENICE — Mayor Tyrone Echols said a study showing Venice to be one of the nation's poorest suburbs wasn't news to him.

"Venice being on the list was no surprise," Echols said. "I've been working with little or no money for 10 years or so."

A study by urbanologist Pierre deVise of Roosevelt University in Chicago showed Venice as number 11 on the list of the 15 poorest metropolitan areas based upon per capita income. The study showed its per capita income as $6,581.

Two other Metro East communities were included on the poorest list. Alorton was ranked fifth, with a per capita income of $5,795, and East St. Louis was ranked sixth with a per capita income of $5,973.

Ford Heights, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, was listed as the poorest in the nation with a per capita income of $5,240.

Two St. Louis suburbs made the list of the 15 richest: Ladue, number 4, with a per capita income of $55,962, and Frontenac, number 12, with a per capita income of $49,615.

Kenilworth, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, was listed as richest with a per capita income of $61,956.

The survey is conducted by deVise every two years, but this is the first year he has included St. Louis suburbs outside St. Louis County.

State Rep. Sam Wolf, D-Granite City, who grew up in Venice, said Wednesday he had not heard about the survey.

'Catholic Times' wins award

Catholic Times, the weekly newspaper of the Diocese of Springfield in Illinois, earned second place in national competition for the "Best Single Ad Originating With the Paper" in 1988.

Announcement of the award was made May 26 during the national convention of the Catholic Press Association, which presents awards for excellence annually to Catholic newspapers, magazines and book publishers.

The award-winning ad was a page headlined "Love is patient...Love is kind..." one of a series published jointly by the 10 Catholic hospitals in the Springfield diocese as part of a campaign called "Catholic Hospital and You: Devoted to the Sacredness and Dignity of All Human Life."

The ad's designer was Sally Wojcicki, the Times' advertising manager, who worked on the series in cooperation with a committee of marketing specialists at the hospitals.

The judges called the ad an "excellent example of 'sensitive and dramatic advertising.'"

The Times has a circulation of more than 44,000 in 28 central Illinois counties.

Teacher serves as writing judge

The National Council of Teachers of English has appointed Cynthia Hormell, a Granite City High School teacher, as regional judge for the 1989 NCTE Achievement Awards in Writing.

Through this nationally recognized competition, now in its 32nd year, 800 high school seniors are cited for excellence in writing and recommended to colleges and universities for admission and for financial aid, if needed.

More than 6,000 students have been nominated for Achievement Awards in 1989. Results of the contest will be announced in October.

Students are nominated for Achievement Awards in Writing by their high school English departments and chosen for recognition by state judging committees. Each nominee submits an impromptu theme and a sample of his or her best writing to be judged.

The regional judging committees are composed of both high school and college teachers who work under the direction of state coordinators.

The National Council of Teachers of English is made up of more than 90,000 individual teachers and institutional members at all levels of instruction, from elementary school through graduate college.

NCTE publishes journals, books and recordings to aid teachers in the classroom and in their professional development.

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

When a person slips on ice or snow in a store's parking lot, is he entitled to be compensated for injuries he sustains? The answer to this question may depend on whether the injured party is an employee of the store or merely a patron. Cases in Illinois show that it is much more difficult for a store patron to recover money damages for such an injury than it is for an employee.

An employee of the store will merely have to demonstrate that the injury occurred in the course of his employment. He will not have to show that the owner was negligent in failing to maintain the parking lot. An injury to an employee while on the lot during normal working hours is generally compensable.

A store patron, on the other hand, would have to demonstrate negligence on the part of the property owner to recover for his injuries. In Illinois, a property owner has no liability for injuries resulting from a fall on snow or ice which has accumulated naturally and has not been disturbed by the owner. There is no duty to remove natural accumulations of snow and ice even after a reasonable length of time. Even if the owner of the parking lot attempts to remove the snow and this leaves a natural ice formation underneath, this does not itself constitute negligence.

Two cases will help illustrate this distinction. In one case, a shopping mall patron slipped and fell on a loading ramp, hurting his leg and knee. In this instance, the patron was helping a store clerk load a ping-pong table that he had just purchased. It had begun to snow, and there was snow on the ramp when he fell. The Court held that the patron could not recover against the store and dismissed the case.

In another case, a worker employed for 24 years slipped and fell in the company parking lot, severely injuring his hand. The evidence showed that although he was not due to begin work until 7:00 o'clock, on the morning in question he arrived at 6:00 o'clock to find the parking lot covered with ice and snow. He proceeded about 15 feet toward the company exterior, and when he fell. In this case, the Illinois Supreme Court held that the injury was in the course of his employment and was compensable.

"This helps now, instead of waiting and having to cut out programs," he said.

The Madison School District recently announced it is considering cutting band and several sports programs including soccer, boys baseball, girls softball, and football and basketball at the freshman and sophomore levels.

The order in which school programs should be cut is a question that Wolf said he couldn't answer. The elected school boards, he said, must make those decisions and he said he has confidence in their abilities.

Wolf said, however, that he thinks sports should be retained as sports, but not to the detriment of other educational programs.

"Sports are important for young people," he said. "Sports build character and prepare young people for things in adult life in ways that other programs don't. Sports are as much a part of education as any other part of the curriculum."

It does not surprise him, Wolf said, that the top athletes at Venice High School are also top students.

boards, he said, must make those decisions and he said he has confidence in their abilities.

Wolf said, however, that he thinks sports should be retained as sports, but not to the detriment of other educational programs.

"Sports are important for young people," he said. "Sports build character and prepare young people for things in adult life in ways that other programs don't. Sports are as much a part of education as any other part of the curriculum."

It does not surprise him, Wolf said, that the top athletes at Venice High School are also top students.

Right now, he is focusing on the present.

"I was always told you should have something to shoot for," Herbert said. "My goal is to be top college athlete."

While at VHS, Herbert was president of the student council, the National Honor Society and the senior class. He also played on the basketball and baseball teams.

He happily packs his bags. "I just can't wait to get out of the present."

"But it seems to me we were not considered St. Louis suburbs for things that could benefit us. Then we're called the East Side," he said. "Only whenever it's something detrimental, then we're pulled into that mold."

"Maybe it draws the survey's attention from somewhere else that they want to cover up," Echols said. The survey only listed the 15 poorest suburbs of the 15 largest metropolitan areas.

"There's many poorer cities down on the Mexican border that aren't included because they're not near large metropolitan areas," he said.

Lawmakers will focus on future issues

By Jason Moody

P-R/R Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Although area lawmakers reacted with sympathy and concern after the retirement announcement of Jim Wright — the first forced resignation of a House speaker in American history — they have also expressed a desire to get on with future business.

Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., was elected as the 49th speaker of the U.S. House on Tuesday.

"I am hopeful that we can move quickly to elect a new leadership team that will restore confidence in our Congressional leadership and get on with the important legislative initiatives of the day," Rep. Jerry Costello said after Wright's May 31 resignation speech.

The Belleville Democrat was also quick to announce his support for Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., for House majority leader, the post held by Foley until becoming speaker.

here," Todd said. He'll be leaving June 25 for the University of Illinois where he'll take part in "Summer Bridge," a pre-college program.

Lake Herbert, Todd has been interested in engineering for about two years.

"I love math," he said. He isn't sure what field of engineering he's interested in yet so he plans to try them all.

I guess that's the only way to find out," Todd said. He is the son of Dorothy Wise.

Todd will be on his own on campus this summer but that will change this fall when friends of his, who began classes at the university last year, return.

"I guess I am a little nervous but I'm really looking forward to it," Todd said.

At graduation, Todd received a Good Citizenship award. In school he was vice president of the senior class, a basketball player and a member of the student council and National Honor Society.

Former Venice resident Pete Fields, an unsuccessful candidate for U.S. Congress and former Madison County Auditor, said the news of his hometown is regrettable, but not a surprise.

"Home will always be the friends and people who live there, not the abandoned and burned-out homes," Fields said. "Eleventh in the nation, it's terrible."

"The tragedy is not these lists, but that there is real poverty down there and a lot of setbacks that have hit real people. I would hope something could be done, but I'm not sure what it is. I doubt the people who make the lists have an answer either."

College loans vs. grants: surprising answers

To the editor:

This nation has to do better in education. You will continue to hear me say that over and over, until we act to change our priorities.

One of many illustrations of this shortcoming is in higher education.

In the last nine years the average cost of college — eliminating the inflation factor — has risen by 40 percent. During that same period, family income grew 33 percent and federal assistance for students rose 3 percent.

It should not surprise anyone, then, that in many key measures of using talent we are slipping. For example, the number of blacks graduating from high schools has risen over those same years, while the number going to college has dropped.

Not only has student financial aid dropped, but the number of blacks who have been shifted from a primary emphasis on grants to go to college, to loans.

What's wrong with that? A number of things:

1) It costs the federal government more money. That may be hard for some to believe but it is true. Because we subsidize interest and also pay for loan defaults the costs are escalating. Of the money provided for student loans this year, 43 percent is not going for loans, but to pay for defaults.

2) It discourages college attendance. That happens for two reasons. It is a barrier to some people to take out loans in the first place, particularly if you come from a family unaccustomed to taking out loans, or you are from a family that has been burdened already by having too much debt. A second factor is that we now have studies that show that students who go to college through grants are more likely to stay and complete their work than students who rely on loans.

3) The loans often postpone the traditional American dream. What is that dream? Having a home of your own and a family.

One young couple I talked to recently is faced with repayments of $425 a month for seven years. They're living on limited income. They would like to have that home and family, but they see no alternative but to postpone those hopes.

4) Loans discriminate. We have made a great deal of progress in this country that we can look to with pride. But it is still true that those of us who are white males will on the average earn more when we graduate from college than those of you who are female or members of minority groups. That means that it is easier for some people to repay loans than for others.

5) Loans twist occupational goals. You're a college student, facing $10,000 to $15,000 in loan repayments when you get out of college. You must choose between majoring in business or law, or becoming either a teacher or a social worker. You are a person above average talent, who would like to become a teacher or a social worker, but you also want to pay off that loan quickly. Is the nation better served by your shifting over to a major in business or becoming a lawyer? Probably not, yet that is the way we tilt things.

I do not favor doing away with loans. We should keep the loan program we have, but as we recognize that more student aid is essential for the nation's future, we should shift what we spend toward more grants.

For most American families, sending young people to college is a struggle more of a struggle than it should be. If we devoted more than the present 2 percent of the federal budget to education, and did it wisely, it would be less of a struggle for these families.

And the nation would be well served.

Drug abuse victims cannot wait

To the editor:

Drug and alcohol abuse is an increasing problem in our community today. The problem seems to be announced at every opportunity through a variety of TV shows, newspaper articles and campaign speeches. However, solutions are rarely discussed.

Presently an Illinois citizen that has a substance abuse problem must wait four to six months for a residential treatment bed. Most individuals are unable to wait four to six months for help and therefore refuse to seek treatment.

We as citizens can make a change by supporting any tax increase that will allocate dollars to create residential treatment beds for the substance abuser. This can be our step toward the solution instead of walking away from the problem.

Did somebody forget the little guy?

To the editor:

Our politicians are just like the leaders in Central America. They don't listen or care about the little guy.

The people in the area of the proposed Scott Joint-Use Airport are concerned. They went to the hearings and went to the polls April 4, 1989. They cast their vote almost 2 to 1 to oppose this pork barrel project.

The local, state and federal politicians have no interest in their views. I call this dictatorship.

What are they hiding from the taxpayer? Why in the final report did they use the words "could, should and perhaps so many times"? If things were so rosy why didn't they say it will or will not?

Anytime someone said or did anything against joint use, proponents said it's too early and we don't know all the facts about the Scott Joint-Use Airport.

In the first report, the cost was $382,000,000 and would need 1,000 acres of land. The second report said the cost was $183,000,000 and would need 3,000 acres of land and now the cost is under $170,000,000 and 4,200 acres of land. Inflation keeps going up and more land is to be purchased and costs are going down.

They must think the farmers are waiting to give them this great farmland that can never be replaced if once destroyed.

They also stated in the Phase One report that we would have a debt of over $267 million by 2005 but now no such figure is in the final report.

They also talked of 6,000 jobs to be created by this project and now the last figure I heard is about 3,000 jobs projected. Sometimes I think they reach up in the clouds and come out with numbers.

Webster gone, but memory lives

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The bell rings and Principal Helen Schmisser barely has time to step out of the doorway as Webster School children begin charging out the door.

It was a typical scene all around the school district Tuesday as the 1988-89 school year came to an end, but for Webster, a kindergarten through sixth grade center, it also marked the end of its 82-year history.

Lake School, which was closed six years ago, will be re-opened this fall to house the Webster children. Work on the 30-year-old Lake building has been ongoing for several months and is expected to continue throughout the summer.

"The children are excited about the move," Schmisser said. "I thought they would be, but I never dreamed they'd want to leave here so much."

The physical state of the school has been in a rapid state of decline for some time. Cracked walls, chipping paint and floors with holes are commonplace. One of the restrooms in the building's lower level lacks hot water and faucets on several of the sinks and has been dubbed "the dungeon" by children.

"The teachers are excited about moving to a newer, cleaner building," Marilyn Frith, a special education teacher at Webster for 17 years, said.

"When I first started working here I thought the nostalgia of it all was great, but that wears off quickly."

For Carla (Sanders) Peery, attending Webster School has been something of a family tradition.

Beginning with Carla's grandmother, Audrey (Filippo) Stone in the 1920s and ending with Carla's daughter, Chelsey, 5, four generations of her family have gone to Webster.

Carla and her mother, Diane (Hunter) Sanders, also went to the school.

"When we bought this house four years ago, the first thing they both said (mother and grandmother) was 'Oh, Chelsey will get to go to Webster,'" Carla said. "But she'll be the last one who will."

Carla and her husband, Michael also have another daughter, Kaleigh, 2.

"Just about every school I went to is gone now," Diane Sanders, 48, said. In addition to Webster, she attended Washington School for one year and also went to Central Junior High.

Washington School, purchased by Walter Aerne, was destroyed by fire in the early hours of May 4. Central Junior High was closed in 1973 and was accepted by Granite City Township in 1974 after unsuccessful efforts to sell it. It is now the site of the Granite City Township Hall.

Chelsey is excited about the prospect of a new school — after all, all her friends and teachers will be there too, she says.

Her mother is equally excited for her, but like other parents still has her concerns.

"I was real hesitant and didn't like the idea at first," Peery said. "I'm happy but I'm still worried about getting her in and out everyday."

Al Brueggemann has taught physical education at Webster for the last 30 years. Raised in St. Louis, Brueggemann first came to Granite City for that job.

"It was a first job that never ended," Brueggemann said.

Webster also saw the beginning of a romance for Brueggemann, who first met his wife, Sally, when she came to teach there in the late '60s.

"Well, it definitely has some sentimental value," Brueggemann said. "But what I'm really going to miss is the wood floor (of the gym)." At Lake School, as with many of the district's newer schools, the cafeteria has tables that fold back into the wall, allowing the room to double as the gym.

But Brueggemann looks forward to the move for the sake of the children at Webster.

"It will be a nice facility for the kids," Brueggemann said. "Reports show that environment is the number one factor in raising test scores."

But what has kept teachers at Webster School, a building that is literally falling down around them?

"It's not the building — it's the people in it," Bill Brooks, a Webster teacher for 25 years, said. "When it comes down to it, you need to be far more concerned with the quality of the personnel and this is a good group."

The final fate of Webster School is still uncertain. For now, the school will join the ranks of other vacant schools in the district.

Still vacant are Nameoki and Logan schools, two of six schools closed at the end of the 1982-83 school year. Also closed then were Lake, Emerson, Johnson and High School North.

Lake will re-open this fall; Emerson was sold to Nestle; Johnson was bought by the Knight of Columbus and is now the site of their hall; and North was purchased by Belleville Area College in 1985 and now serves as the college's Granite City Campus (GCC).

Three other schools, McKinley, Stallings and Washington, were closed at the end of the 1978-79 school year. McKinley now serves as the Wellness Center of St. Elizabeth Medical Center. Stallings, owned by Lamar Moore Construction, is leased by the Edwardsville Montessori School.

Jim Jeffries, Coolidge Junior High School principal, served his first principalship at Webster. Jeffries, there from 1975-1984, saw one of the biggest Webster transitions in 1982 when the school's coal furnace was converted to gas heat.

"It was always interesting to watch the custodian (the late Al St. John) push that wheelbarrow full of stoker coal up the ramp," Jeffries recalled. "You were never sure if he was going to get to the top without dumping it."

The conversion also freed a room. The former coal bin was transformed into a PTA/supply room, Jeffries said.

While he agrees that it's never good to see a school close, like the teachers Jeffries says that the building isn't all that important.

"The building is just bricks and stone," Jeffries said. "For me it doesn't hold any special characteristics, yet I have several fond memories of the children and teachers and staff that were there."

While school has ended, work at Webster continues.

"I'll still be back here packing next week," Schmisser said. She estimates that each of the school's 16 teachers will have 40 boxes of belongings and that from the main office she will generate 100 more.

Judging from the stack of belongings, including computers, in the Chapter 1 reading room, Schmisser may have underestimated.

Carefully wrapped packages line the area in front of the room's windows. Merna Davis and Jo Harris are taking no chances with their belongings.

Now Ron Landman, District 9 director of buildings and grounds, and his staff will have to see that all the belongings make it over Lake.

"After having packed it, if we had to move all this stuff too we'd go on a cruise and not come back," Harris said.

'When we bought this house four years ago, the first thing they said was 'Oh, Chelsey will get to go to Webster.' But she'll be the last one.'

Unopposed in town, county voting for most of 34 years

The Press-Record said editorially May 25 that the Madison County Democratic Party's center of political power may be moving north, from the Quad City area to Alton. It's true there is such a trend, partly due to the growing influence of Illinois House Majority Leader Jim McPike.

The comment followed the death May 24 of Walker 24 of McPike's Simmons of Venice and Granite City, a longtime party leader.

But the idea of a shift toward Alton also spotlights the political career of Nelson "Nellie" Hagnauer.

THOUGH CONTROVERSIAL by virtue of his multiple offices, and various policies, Hagnauer remains a major player in this region's governmental and political processes.

For example, for the June 11 picnic sponsored by the Democratic Elected Madison County Officials, Hagnauer is slated as master of ceremonies to introduce visiting national, state and regional officials.

"Buck" served as chairman of the county's Democrats from 1960 to March 1975. When Simmons was required to give up the party post due to his vice as 5th District appellate court clerk in Mount Vernon, Hagnauer was elected to head the county party.

Hagnauer voluntarily gave up the post in 1978 and was succeeded as the party's chairman by the late Christ Costoff, a Madison alderman.

A QUICK PROFILE of Nellie starts with his triple role as Granite City Township supervisor, Madison County Board chairman and Madison County Transit District chairman.

He also has held leadership roles in such groups as the Southwestern Illinois Metropolitan and Regional Planning Commission and the East-West Gateway Coordinating Council.

Hagnauer has served as chairman and vice chairman of Gateway. The agency is the council of local governments for both the Illinois and Missouri portions of the St. Louis metropolitan area.

NEWLY ELECTED to another term as Granite City supervisor in April 1988, he has won that office continuously since 1961.

His latest term, expiring in 1993, will give him 32 years as the township's top official.

In addition, Hagnauer preceded his election as supervisor with six years as an assistant Granite City supervisor. That position involved no township duties but did provide a position on the 49-member Madison County Board of Supervisors.

THE VETERAN OFFICIAL

has a lengthy record — 34 years — to be precise — of consecutive service in county government.

He has represented District 20 since the 29-member Madison County Board was organized on May 1, 1972. Chosen by his fellow board members, he has been the 29-unit board's only chairman throughout its history.

His service as county board chairman actually goes back to 1971. He became the County Board of Supervisors chairman that year after the death of Chairman Harold Landolt.

THE BIGGER BOARD consisted of the 24 township supervisors and 25 assistant supervisors; the number of assistants differed in each township, based on population.

A native and lifelong resident of Granite City, Nellie has been active in many groups and has received numerous awards, including national recognition of Madison county governmental accomplishments.

He and his wife, the former Bernadine "Bernie" Ingham, have a family that includes a daughter, Carol, and a son, Nelson.

Although a Democrat, Hagnauer has worked closely with both parties on the county board and has received backing from both sides.

A BIPARTISAN APPROACH has led to a series of balanced budgets, despite the stress and strain of the national economic recession in the early 1980s and a 1980s reduction in federal financial support for counties.

In recent months, the board paved the way for construction of an administrative office building adjacent to the County Courthouse. The courthouse then will be limited to courtrooms and court-related offices.

Also during Hagnauer's leadership, a modern Madison County jail was constructed.

TO HELP COPE with the recession, the county became active in bolstering the tax base and job base by issuing industrial development bonds.

To foster development of the Quad City area, the county board served as sponsor for a special service area in which sanitary sewers were installed in local neighborhoods that had lacked them.

As supervisor, Hagnauer was instrumental in securing federal funds to construct the Granite City High School senior center building and senior citizen center on the site of the former Central Junior High School.

IN RETURN for receiving the school site free of charge, the town provided free space for Quad City area special education offices for seven years.

He also aided lighting of the Granite City High School soccer and baseball fields, provision of playground equipment, snow removal, establishment of a medical alert program, securing of vehicles to transport aged and handicapped persons, financing of the Granite City High School North bleachers, and installation of fencing near The Anchorage senior citizens apartments.

His township responsibilities include administering aid to needy individuals and families.

A MEMBER of the Operating Engineers union for 17 years, he was employed as a tanker man by the Phillips Petroleum and Pipe Line Co. until going on leave of absence due to his governmental duties.

Hagnauer was elected in 1980 to the Softball Hall of Fame and in 1987 to the Granite City Sports Hall of Fame as one of its first group of honorees.

He served in the U.S. Navy from 1945 to 1947.

Hagnauer joined the County Transit District board in December 1982 and was elected as its chairman in January 1989. He is a former member of the Madison County (assessment) Board of Review.

IN 1982 he was named to the board of the seven-county Southwestern Illinois Areawide Business Development Finance Corporation and to the Community Development Steering Committee of the National Association of Counties. In 1985 he was presented the 1984 Best Award by the Madison County Bar Association.

East-West Gateway is among the groups that have honored him for his devoted administration of the county government.

Although some people regard him as too powerful, Hagnauer, 61, seldom encounters direct opposition at the ballot box. He has run unopposed for elective office more times than almost any other resident of Madison County.

Granite City Elks honored him in 1987 as Citizen of the Year.

Petty's solo LP welcome break from work with Heartbreakers

By Alan Sculley
Staff writer

It took Tom Petty 13 years to do a solo album. Now that he's finally done it, he has released a record that rates with the best albums he's done with his backing band, the Heartbreakers.

While there is no mistaking who is the man behind the music on "Full Moon Fever," this album cuts a more diverse path than Petty has managed with the Heartbreakers. "I Won't Back Down" and "Free Fallin'" two first-rate tracks that open the LP, offer a stronger element of pop than Petty generally displays. Part of the reason for this, no doubt, is that the songs were co-written by Jeff Lynne, of Electric Light Orchestra fame.

Another Petty-Lynne song, "Face in the Crowd," fits the pop mold, mixing a dreamy Beach Boys-type feel with folk touches. Petty and Lynne also collaborated on three other songs on the album.

"Ver So Bad," another folk-tuned tune, features lyrics with a nice touch of dark humor. "Zombie Zoo" is a hard-rocking tune accented by swirling organ riffs. "Mind with a Heart of its Own," is a catchy, rollicking song that sounds more like Petty and the Heartbreakers than the other Petty-Lynne compositions.

The hard-rock edge that appears on that song rears its enjoyable head on two other songs. "Love Is a Long Road," written by Petty and Heartbreaker guitarist Mike Campbell, and "Runnin' Down a Dream," penned by Petty, Lynne and Campbell, are two of the best hard-rock tunes Petty ever has recorded.

Petty and the Heartbreakers, incidentally, still are very much a band. But with the success of "Full Moon Fever" and the Traveling Wilburys' LP (Petty and Lynne were two-fifths of that group, which also featured George Harrison, Bob Dylan and the late Roy Orbison), here's hoping Petty continues to make time for outside projects.

'Real' Arnie Becker just wants to play ball

By Harry Hamer
Staff writer

Actor Corbin Bernsen has two comedy films to his credit this year ("Major League" and "Disorganized Crime") and the ever-popular television series, "L.A. Law." As the smooth talking divorce attorney on "L.A. Law," Bernsen's character, Arnie Becker, has become a national hero in the legal world of domestic relations.

But believe it or not, Bernsen recently told me that, professionally speaking, he is most excited about his role in "Major League."

"It was a lot of fun to do because as a kid one of my things was baseball," Bernsen said. "I played baseball all the time. My dream occupation was to be a baseball player. Part of my reasons for getting into acting, therefore, was the ability to be able to go off and assume some of these roles that I would have liked to have played out in life."

It was Bernsen's respect for the theme of "L.A. Law" that made him pursue a chance to work in the series.

"The interest was the material," Bernsen said. "My character of Arnie Becker was pretty self-absorbed, but I knew that he wasn't one-dimensional. I had to find a way to make him likable. I had to make him dimensional. I had to make him have a reason for being the way he is.

"I got the part like any other actor, just reading, reading and reading. I actually came out to California for the part after I was turned down in New York. I kept pursuing it. Finally, I prevailed."

'Beaver' cast stars at 'Scoops of Fun'

If all the ice cream you can eat isn't enough, if having all the fun you possibly have in one day isn't enough; if free entertainment, great contest prizes and helping out a local children's hospital isn't enough — then how about the chance to see some of the cast from the one-and-only Leave it to Beaver television show, exclusively at the fourth annual Scoops of Fun ice cream celebration, June 10 and 11 at St.

Louis Union Station. Clarence "Lumpy" Rutherford (Frank Banks), Eddie Haskell (Ken Osmond) and his real-life son, and of course the "Beaver" (Jerry Mathers) will make a special appearance for opening ceremonies at noon on Saturday. Scoops of Fun is an ice cream celebration sponsored by the Midland United Dairy Industry Association. All proceeds are donated to Cardinal Glennon Children's Hospital in St. Louis.

Living World a living wonder

By Pamela Selbert
Staff writer

The Living World, the newest attraction at the St. Louis Zoo is ready for a stampede of visitors. It officially opened June 1.

The state-of-the-art center has been called by zoo officials an addition that will "lead zoos of the world into the 21st century and set a precedent for the zoos of the future."

Living World, in the $17.9 million Wetterau Pavilion in the northwest corner of the Zoo, occupies 55,000 square feet of airy, high-ceiling space. Its exhibits focus on animal diversity — from the simplest single-celled animals to man — as well as ecology and conservation. An enormous number of animal species and interpretive exhibits have been assembled for the enjoyment of visitors.

Step inside, and visitors have a choice of several spots to begin. A good one is at the May Company Hall: An introduction to the Animals. A life size (and very life-like) Charles Darwin robot stands just inside the door to greet you. Darwin, whose Theory of Evolution explains the diversity of the animal kingdom, stands to deliver a four-minute talk explaining that "all the animals in this room are related to one another — a great family of life."

The real-life Darwin hardly could be a better speaker. This one's eyes move and he gestures while telling how animals have "learned to face the challenge of living," often adapting in the process. Once the Darwin robot is finished, visitors are ready to explore the exhibit. They can spend as much or as little time as they choose, but it would be easy to fill an entire morning or afternoon.

Exhibits are arranged counter-clockwise, starting with the most primitive forms of life, one-celled animals too small to see, but which in the center have been enlarged and can be watched on video. A series of video screens encircles the room at ceiling level, so there are no problems seeing no matter how many people are in front of you. Panels of text, exhibits, videos and even live animals interpret life from these simple creatures through the slightly more complex animals such as coral, sponges and jellyfish to shells. Visitors learn there are 7,500 different species of bivalves, and many of the beautiful creatures are displayed here. The Living World is open free to the public during the zoo's regular hours — 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day. For more information, call (314) 781-0900.

Bonnie Raitt
Splendid time

'Nick of Time' apt title for LP from Bonnie Raitt

By Alan Sculley

If an album finally is going to introduce Bonnie Raitt to a large audience, it should be "Nick of Time," her splendid new LP.

Raitt has been an off-overlooked talent during her 18-year recording career, and "Nick of Time" offers a fine showcase for her many talents.

The self-penned title song opens the album on an intensely personal note as Raitt, 39, takes a hard look at the realities of growing older. She sings of a friend who realizes she is running out of time to have children and about the gradual loss of her own youthful looks. Then Raitt gives the song an upbeat turn in the final verse as she tells of meeting a stable, mature love in the nick of time.

The lyrics to "Nick of Time" are set to a soft bluesy pop ballad, with Raitt playing keyboards and singing a lovely melody. As such, the song offers a vivid contrast to the rocking blues for which Raitt is best known.

But not surprisingly, Raitt straps on her guitar for a few tasty rockers on "Nick of Time." She hooks up with the Eubulus Thunderbirds for her original tune on the album, "The Road Is My Middle Name." The song, featuring mostly acoustic instrumentation and the harmonica work of Bird Kim Wilson, offers a fine slice of country blues.

Raitt puts some funk into the blues-rock equation with her spicy cover of John Hiatt's wonderful tune, "Thing Called Love." This song gives Raitt an opportunity to contribute some of her trademark slide-guitar work.

"Real Man," written by Jerry Williams, is the LP's hardest rocking track, built on a solid blues foundation and sparked by

Documentary studies 'face' of AIDS virus

KTVI-TV and Channel 2 News will present a half-hour special, "A Face of AIDS," at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

Channel 2 News Medical Reporter Lisa Allen and Channel 2 News photographer Mark Brueggemann have been following the story of David DeRaedt, a St. Louis AIDS patient.

Both Allen and Brueggemann met DeRaedt a year ago during the taping of a story about AIDS.

At that time, he agreed to allow Channel 2 News to follow him and his fight against the deadly disease until his death.

According to Allen, DeRaedt "wanted people in St. Louis to know more about AIDS, to understand people with AIDS, and he thought a show about him might do that."

"I in turn, wanted to focus on a person behind the statistics, in order to sensitize viewers to the disease."

DeRaedt died on April 22 at the age of 40 in his home in Soulard.

This special presentation is aimed at the human side of AIDS, delving deep behind the mere statistics to track the physical, emotional and social toll of the disease.

Allen visited DeRaedt at home on numerous occasions, followed him to the doctor's office and the hospital for his treatments, traced his family history and his chance encounter with "Patient Zero," the so-called "Typhoid Mary" of AIDS.

The documentary portrays the loneliness and isolation of living with AIDS, and the courage and tenacity DeRaedt exhibited in the face of this disease.

Wilson's harmonica. Raitt's slide guitar and Williams' plucky piano playing. Another Williams song, "I Will Not Be Denied," is a good slow-burning rocker.

The other uptempo tunes — "Have A Heart" and "Love Letter" — were written by Bonnie Hayes. Both are tuneful pop songs that have plenty of appeal, but lack the depth and subtlety of much of "Nick of Time's" other material.

The remaining four songs are ballads, and two of them are standouts. "Too Soon to Tell" is a winsome countryish tune that features a pretty guitar line. "Cry On My Shoulder," which gets a vocal assist from Graham Nash and David Crosby, nicely mixes a pop sound with Raitt's tasteful slide guitar.

With strong songs from start to finish, "Nick of Time" stands as a highlight in Raitt's career. And considering that her career had reached an uncertain point after her contract with Warner Bros. Records ended with her 1986 LP, "Nine Lives," a first-rate LP like "Nick of Time" could not have come at a better time.

Channel 5 anchor Ford has career in shape

By Frank Hunter

Start writer

Fiddle-fit and nicely tanned, Dick Ford insists he's no jock despite a regime of frequent bicycling, summertime swimming, and every-other-day jogs with his wife, Gail.

But whatever he is doing, it must be right for him and his career.

"I gotta face it. In my business I've got to feel good and look good because if I don't, I'm history," said Ford, a 21-year veteran reporter and anchorman now with KSDK-TV (Channel 5).

Ford, 55, grew up in Turtle Creek, Pa., a mill town not far from Pittsburgh and Donora, Pa., the city where Stan Musial grew up.

Although he majored in political science at the University of Pittsburgh, he worked for Pittsburgh's KDKA-TV as a mail clerk, film editor, summer replacement announcer, tour conductor, switchboard operator and news writer, and soon his career was set. After two years on active Navy duty, Ford returned to television and in 1968 came to KMOX-TV (Channel 4), now KNOV.

In 1969 he went to work at Channel 5, moving steadily from one major assignment to another, and in January 1982 Ford began co-anchoring the 5, 6 and 10 p.m. Eyewitness News with Karen Foss.

Gail Ford, a sales representative for Southwestern Bell's Yellow Pages, once worked briefly as a graphics news artist on Channels 2 and 5. The Fords are the parents of son Neal, 3. Ford has two sons by a previous marriage: Michael, 23, and Hunter, 19.

When I first came to KSDK we had five reporters: Chris Condon, Bob Chase, John Roedel, John Auble and myself. Except for Auble everyone was an anchorman.

The Fords occupy an older home in University City where they are embroiled in the 15th year of a 25-year-long rehabilitation project.

"I take a shot at painting and carpentry but I don't fool with electricity or plumbing, those items are for the pros. Ford said, "I don't do much gardening but have landscaped a lot and built walls. I guess you'd say I move a lot of dirt around."

Ford does not find his broadcasting schedule particularly irksome.

"I come in about 2 p.m. and stick around until 11 p.m.," he said. "They rarely call me in early. These days anchormen and women seem to do a lot of P.R. work, making luncheon talks and doing United Way things. It isn't the practice of pure news but somehow I find myself involved in a lot of outside things."

Ford does his share of arguing the play of news with his superiors but admits that anchor people do not have the decision-making clout they once had.

"In the old days we decided what went into a newscast but now more people are involved," he said. "I am the final editor, but I do get outside input and in the long run that's probably for the best."

Ford said he does not remember exactly when he started aiming for a career in television but he did work on his high school paper in Pittsburgh.

"It was a good one, no gossip stuff," he said. "I finally became the editor, got involved in the drama club, and put together a radio show as a high school sophomore. The radio station was right across the street from the KDKA-TV station and, being 17 and naive, I applied for a summer flunky job and got it. I stayed on, mixing paint, luging props, delivering mail, running the switchboard and drifted into the news field by screening the calls for the news department on the switchboard."

The flunky job lasted through Ford's four years of college. Ford joined the Navy after graduating in 1955 with a political science degree and subsequently worked in Plattsburg at WPTZ-TV on the Canadian border, with later stints on television in Charleston, W.Va., and Minneapolis.

DICK FORD came to Channel 5 in 1969.

The most satisfying part of his job is a day loaded with what he calls "honest to God" news: "not stories we have to hype up; stories that can stand on their own," he said.

Ford does not watch a lot of television "but I disagree with people who say there is nothing good on it. Even some of those stupid sitcoms are tolerable, and I enjoy watching "Sesame Street" and "Captain Kangaroo" with Neal.

"As to local coverage I think we're open to honest criticism. We can always improve. Television news is a relatively new medium. The technology coming along is awesome but it's going to take more time for the industry to mature."

"I just hope I'm around when it finally does."

Organized storage lightens kitchen duty

When planning a kitchen space, what is included on the inside of the cabinetry is as important as the length of available counter space, or the number of drawers in the kitchen.

Functional space planning means saving your time and energy. And that means well-organized interior storage systems.

When planning where to put things, follow these rules to save yourself time and energy, advise kitchen planning specialists with Whirlpool Kitchens Inc. Store items at first or last place of use. For example, most cooks store all pans in the cooking area. But during many types of preparation, water goes into the container first. Thus, it is a step-saving storage principle to provide space for several pans near the sink.

Another example is everyday dish storage. Storage at first place of use would be near the table. Storage at the last place of use would be near the sink or dishwasher.

Store items in multiple locations if used for different tasks. Example: Measuring cups and spoons might be needed at the sink and in the food preparation area. Thus, two sets of tools, placed at each point of use, will be more efficient.

Items used together should be stored together. Examples of items that should be grouped together: recipe books, paper and pencil; foodstuffs, mixing equipment and hand appliances (stored together in baking center); and freezing paper, foil, freezing tape and marking pen used for labeling frozen foods.

Stored items should be easy to locate at a glance. Example: Canned goods should be one deep on narrow shelving are easy to identify, and eliminate searching for the wanted can. Drawer contents should be organized in compartments.

Like articles should be stored or grouped together. Canned goods organized in storage units according to contents are easy to locate.

This principle will also provide a visual inventory when the shopping list is made. Keeping all frying pans together allows the homemaker to locate the correct utensil quickly.

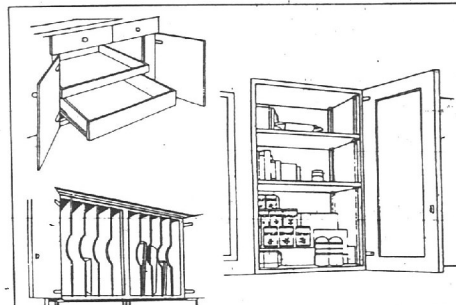

Frequently used items should be stored within easy reach. Easy reach is normally defined as between eye level and hip level, at the front of the cabinet itself. A roll-out shelf allows complete use of the cabinet and is considered one of the most desirable aids in cabinetry.

Items should be easy to grasp at point of storage. "Nesting" or stacking one item on top of another should be avoided. Tray or vertical storage is a way to avoid nesting and stacking.

Items should be stored so that they can be removed easily and without requiring you to remove other items first. Example: Stop-shelving within wall cabinets makes all items visible and easy to reach.

Heavy equipment should be stored at or near floor level. Example: A heavy or bulky appliance stored on a high shelf could accidentally fall on the person removing it. Heavy items near floor level will be easier to lift because the entire body can be used for leverage.

All space should be used for utmost efficiency. This principle should include consideration of what is stored. A "two-year test" is a good rule of thumb.

If an item has not been used in two years, perhaps it should be discarded or given away rather than stored in valuable space. Planning a functional kitchen starts with the right cabinets in the right places. Adequate counter space, and the latest in appliances, are next on your list.

Thirdly, return to those cabinets — make sure that the interior of the cabinets are as carefully planned as the overall kitchen.

Those who wish more information about functional space planning or other kitchen-related subjects should contact Whirlpool Kitchens Inc. 6300 S. Syracuse, Suite 700, Englewood, Colo. 80111.

To protect wood, add the finishing touch

All stained wood requires a finish for protection, says Homer Formby, an expert on the care of wood furniture. A wood with good color and grain pattern may not require a stain, but still requires a clear finish to protect the wood from mildew, blemishes and discolorations.

Below are answers to two questions on finishing commonly asked by callers to Formby's wood-care help line, a free consumer service.

Q. How do I apply a finish?
A. I recommend hand-rubbed finishes, whether a varnish or polyurethane, Formby said. These allow for better penetration into the wood and thorough coverage in hard-to-reach places.

Brushes often leave streaks and uneven areas in the finish; and because they leave the finish on the surface, rather than putting it down in the wood, the finish is more susceptible to damage.

There are varnishes and polyurethane finishes designed for hand rubbing. Just place a few drops of the finish on the palm of a gloved hand, or on a clean, soft cotton cloth or applicator pad. Rub the finish into the wood and allow it to dry overnight.

Buff lightly with fine steel wool and wipe with a dry cloth. Apply a second coat. Additional coats may be applied if desired, especially on open grain or dry wood. (Up to five or six coats of varnish may be desirable for surfaces that will get heavy use.)

Q. When do I use varnish versus a polyurethane finish?

A. The amount of wear-and-tear a piece of furniture receives determines whether to use a varnish or polyurethane. Polyurethane finishes are recommended for table tops, counter-tops and other surfaces that need extra protection against water, food stains, household chemicals and wear.

Because of improvements in polyurethane finishes, they provide a durable, natural finish without the plastic look that they once had.

Varnish can be used on all wood for a classic finish. Tung oil, derived from heart-shaped tung nuts, is added to some varnishes and provides a protective finish that penetrates and dries clear to permit the wood's natural beauty to shine through.

As a third-generation woodworker, Formby has more than 30 years of experience staining, finishing and refinishing wood.

Espalier pruning method a gift from gardeners of ancient Rome

Pruning is an ancient practice whose "family tree" today includes several branches. One of the different pruning methods that have evolved, perhaps the two most extreme forms still in use are topiary and espalier.

Both techniques apparently originated in ancient Rome, and have survived through the centuries, degrees of popularity since that time.

Topiary is the art of forming evergreen plants, such as boxwood and yew, into the shapes of animals, people or geometric figures. A major investment of time and hand labor is required to develop and maintain these unnatural shapes.

Topiary reached its peak of popularity in the middle 1600s. Today, topiary is seldom seen in home landscapes, and only occasionally in public gardens.

Espalier, a much more common form of extreme pruning, forces a plant to grow in a flat plane, usually against a wall or trellis.

Because espalier reached its peak of popularity in France, the term used today is a French word meaning fruit wall. Colonial Americans also practiced espalier, and George Washington grew espaliered fruit trees in his gardens at Mt. Vernon.

Espalier not only continues to be practiced today, but conditions are ripe for a resurgence in its popularity. Many home gardeners have limited space and dwarf fruit trees may be espaliered with less pruning than standard trees. These fruit trees can be both ornamental and productive on a blank wall.

An espalier even may help save energy by shading a sunny wall in summer, or reducing rapid air movement across a wall on windy winter days.

Those who would like to espalier flowering plants might consider pyracantha, spirea, flowering quince, forsythia, magnolia or evergreens such as yew.

To make an espalier, branches do not have to be pinned tightly against a wall, but may be allowed to remain about 6 inches from it. This will create dead air space as well as provide more favorable temperatures for plant growth. Fasteners or nails placed into the wall are often used to develop the design.

Espalier also may be done against a trellis or fence. Tying and shaping against a trellis, or fence is easier than shaping with pegs inserted into a wall.

Use soft string, not wire, to tie branches, because wire may bind them as they become thicker. Even cloth ties should be examined occasionally to prevent girdling of branches. As the form develops, branches will become rigid and need fewer ties.

Before beginning, draw the geometric design you want to create on a piece of paper and take it with you whenever you pinch or prune the plant. Start with small, young plants that space as well as provide form from your design. If a branch becomes too woody to be bent properly, cut it back severely to force out young shoots that can be curved properly.

Severe cuts should be made while plants are dormant. Through about mid-July, small twigs may be clipped out as often as needed.

Use lighting for lovely look

General lighting provides overall illumination. It enables you to see and walk about safely. It can be accomplished with ceiling or wall-mounted fixtures, recessed or track lights, table or floor lamps and, perhaps, a chandelier, especially if your living room includes a dining area.

Spotlight paintings, sculpture, houseplants or other prized possessions. Ceiling-mounted lights, properly positioned, highlight the texture of walls and draperies.

Effective accent lighting requires at least three times as much light on the object as the general light surrounding it and is usually provided by track, recessed or wall-mounted fixtures.

Cheatham returns to 1988 form at Tri-City

By Joe Senter
Correspondent

GRANITE CITY — Bert Cheatham got his first 1988 victory at Tri-City Speedway on Saturday. Cheatham, last year's track champion in the U.M.P. late model stocks, worked his way through a crash-filled feature event for the win. A nine-car pileup knocked several cars out of competition on the first turn. Terry Phillips hit the first turn concrete wall, bounced off, then came back to hit it again.

Cheatham finished ahead of Doug McCannan, Dick Taylor, Bobby Dietz, Jim Durbin and Ron Fisher. Bill Faust won the trophy dash followed by Cheatham, Phillips and Mike Wallace won heat races.

John Seets won another feature event in the sportsman's cars. Randy Korte was second. Gary Archambault third, Matt Taylor fourth and Don Carter fifth. Seets, Taylor and Korte took the heat races with the trophy dash going to Korte. There were 25 cars on hand for the event.

PSG beginning soccer practice

Practices for the Prairie State Games soccer competition will begin for Region 8 (Southern) this week.

The scholastic boys 11 will meet at Van Fossen Field in Collinsville on June 8, 13, 15 and 20 at 6 p.m. The scholastic girls 11 will meet June 12, 14 and 19 at the SIUE practice field at 6 p.m. The open men will meet at the SIUE practice field at 10 a.m. Saturday and noon Sunday. The open women will meet at SIUE at 10 a.m. Saturday. For the open women's team, call Ruben Mendoza at Soccer For Fun for more information.

There will also be a tournament for grades 7-10 at the Ball Park Sports Center in O'Fallon on June 23-25. The tournament will be in conjunction with the Prairie State Games. The deadline for entry is June 15. To enter, call the Ball Park at 632-5900.

Park offering gym classes

The Granite City Park District is offering gymnastics classes for children in grades one through 12 at the Brown Recreation Center.

The classes meet on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays starting next Monday. Beginners go from 9-10 a.m., intermediates go from 10-11 a.m. The Advanced Class meets from 11 a.m. to noon. Belinda Beckman, a gymnast and cheerleader from SIUE, will be the instructor with four assistants.

The fee is $5 for park district residents and $10 for non-residents. Children may be registered at the Wilson Park Office and a waiver must be signed by the parent or guardian.

Madison rec center has youth activities

Anyone from Madison ages 8-14 is welcome to attend the summer activity program at the Recreation Center at 9 a.m. each day.

Parents interested in signing their children up should call Jim Broadway at 451-1440.

DePew, Hendrickson head baseball school

An instructional baseball school for children ages 5-12 will meet on diamonds 2 and 3 in Wilson Park on June 12. Registration is being done in the Wilson Park Office. No child will be able to register at the diamonds.

The program will include the fundamentals of baseball. Daren DePew, assistant coach at SIUE and the player/manager of the Granite City Miners, will be the head instructor. Daren Hendrickson, who played at Lewis and Clark College the past two years, will be DePew's assistant.

The program runs for seven weeks and the cost is $5 for park district residents and $10 for non-residents. Babe Champion, recreation supervisor, said the program is for boys on teams as well as those not on teams.

coach some of those teams as late as 1985.

When Jenkins dropped the freshman boys coaching job to devote his time to the girls varsity position, he immediately began lobbying for the formation of an Illinois state tournament. As more schools added girls soccer, the IHSA finally held its first tournament in 1988.

Fittingly, the Lady Kahoks were there. They finished fourth and ended with a 17-44 record, best ever for the program.

But as the popularity of girls soccer continued to grow, so did some of the headaches that usually come with a high-profile job like the one Jenkins held. Jenkins said he heard second-hand criticisms of his coaching from people close to the program, and that disappointed him.

"I read what Jim (Stranz) had to say about why he wanted to step down, and so much of that was true," Jenkins said. "But Jim mentioned burnout. With me it wasn't quite burnout, but all the emotional things with the program getting the better of me."

"Maybe I wanted too much. Maybe a change in scenery is what's needed for the team. I can't rule out wanting to coach again, but it's been a wonderful six-year run and right now this is the thing to do."

Jenkins said he will campaign hard for current JV coach Andy Kosberg to be awarded the varsity position. Kosberg is the only CHS soccer coach still on board from the beginning of the season.

"Andy would do a fine job," Jenkins said. "The girls get along well with Andy, and like Andy. He was quoted as wanting to put a little more fun into the practices and games, and maybe that's what the program needs."

Kosberg, who took over for Jenkins as boys freshman coach in 1985, is also in the running to fill Stranz' vacancy as boys varsity coach.

won 23. It was a good job by Stegemeier, Jack Parker and the team, which probably would have won even more had it not been for an unwise move at mid-season which cost most of the team five games of suspension.

My last act before vacation started was the Lady Warriors' loss to Collinsville in the Alton Sectional championship. In fact, I had been concerned for months that my sister's wedding would make me miss the state soccer tournament.

Unfortunately, I didn't have to miss it. What a heartbreaker — for the second year in a row. It was especially tough for Jennifer Debeve, the spectacular senior captain, who would have shown the northern schools a thing or two at the state tournament. What a nice young lady and a great team leader who will succeed at whatever she does.

There are lots of talented underclassmen returning who will see to it the Lady Warriors won't fall short of state three times in a row.
